Copyright and Ownership:

Children learn about respecting others' work and understanding their own rights as creators. They explore:

- What copyright means and why it exists.
- The importance of giving credit when using others' work (like images, music, or videos).
- How to identify if content is free to use or requires permission.
- The concept of ownership of digital content they create and how to protect it.

These lessons help children understand the value of creativity, how to share content responsibly, and how copyright supports respectful online behavior—especially important in discussions around online bullying and misuse of others' content.
